

Distribution of the German Forces on the Western Front
According to a captured Map dated 30th October, 1918

Source: The German Forces in the Field, November 1918.

Published jointly by The Imperial War Museum, London, Department of Printed Books and The Battery Press, Inc. 1995.

"The Divisions are reproduced as given on the original Map. The exact meaning of the conventional signs against Divisions in reserve is not known."

Note: The abbreviations used are the ones used by the British Army researchers who compiled the map.

Where to Obtain Copies of the Regimental War Diaries / Regimental Histories

- 1) The National Archives in College Park, MD has a significant number of regimental war diaries in its collection. The drawback is that one has to do research in person.
- 2) German Researcher / Publisher Patrick Schallert offers CD Roms of hundreds of German regimental histories that were published after the war--at very reasonable prices. Readers can find his offerings here: <http://www.military-books.lima-city.de/>

a) The green shading indicates that Patrick has copies of these regimental histories available on CD Rom as of 2 April, 2017. The 4-digit number is the order number.

- 3) The next best source is to look on antiquarian book websites. The best German site, in the webmaster's opinion is: <https://www.zvab.com/>

a) Some sub-set of the red-shaded regiments should have published regimental histories that are available on antiquarian book websites. However, one should expect to pay a fair amount for these books.

- 4) Most German unit histories were written at the regimental level.
- 5) The A.-H. units refer to Austro-Hungarian units that fought on the Western Front. To date, no attempt has been made to find histories for these units.
